System Will Be in Force Within a Few Months on Lines of Act by Legislature, It Is Learned Today.

Directors Must Accept the Decision, Before Plan by Which Road and Men Contribute Equally Is in Force.

It is learned today that the officials and employees, of the Boston & Maine railroad have arrived at an agreement upon the conditions under which the pension act passed at the last session of the Legislature will be adopted and accepted over the Boston & Maine system. The decision is along the lines defined in the special legislative enactment, and within a few months the Boston educator, who will head his party employees of the railroad will enter upon the benefits of a pension system.

There were men employed by the company, who were more or less skeptical concerning this act, and they have not sympathized with all the conditions contained in the act itself. It was because of this that the railroad officials and employees took the matter under considera tion. It is now learned upon good authority that both officials and employees of the railroad are agreed upon every stipulation and that the law will go into effect in the next few months, provided the directors accept it.

Under the conditions of the act the railroad will be allowed to take not more than 3 per cent of the wages of the employees each month for use in establishing the pension fund. The railroad company in turn will put in a like sum every month for the same purpose. It is understood-that' the exact amount to be deducted from the salary of the employees has not as yet been determined

JOSEPH BURTT HERE Wife of the Investigator Of the Portuguese Cocoa TO BATTLE AGAINST Trade Aids Him in Work SLAVE COCOA TRADE

English Expert on Portuguese Forcing of African Serfdom, With His Wife, Arrives in Boston Today.

PLANS BIG MEETINGS

Joseph Burtt and wife, representing the Anti-Slavery and Aborigenes Protection Society of London, arrived in Boston today on the steamer Cestrian of the Leyland line for the purpose of starting a two months' campaign in the United States to arouse sufficient moral support to force the eradication of the slave system from the cocoa plantations of the Portuguese islands of Principe and San Thome, in the gulf of Guinea.

In an interview he said that he vas warring not against individuals, but against a system which practically enslaves the natives while keeping within the letter of the law by using so-called contracts. He says that many excellent regulations exist on paper according to which the Portugese officials might satisfy themselves that the laborers are acting voluntarily. As a matter of fact the slaves are brought in gangs before a curator who asks them in Portuguese f they go willingly to the islands.

As a majority of them are ignorant of the language, their consent is taken for granted. They are thus bound to a legal contract which amounts practically to involuntary servitude. Mr. Burtt says that the situation closely parallels that found in our southern states before the war, as the Portuguese planters are as a rule kind to their men and it is only the system which gives chance for ex cesses and in many instances flagrant General Hubbard denies any part in Mr. abuses

> Mr. Burtt lived for several years in close touch with the owners of several of these large plantations and is thoroughly conversant with the Portuguese language. He emphasized that his quarrel is only with a system that holds mankind in practical slavery.

Six years ago Mr. Burtt was induced New York in time for Mr. Peary's arrival to enter this work by Mr. Cadbury, the great English cocoa manufacturer. Many requests are being received by the Hudson-Fulton committee for the boats from cities along the Atlantic seaboard, the Great lakes and the Hudson river, but no definite arrangements have vet been made excepting that next week both craft will proceed up the Hudson river to Troy, stopping at all of the cities and towns en route.

Mr. Hill Says State Will Produce Evidence That the Dealers Met and Agreed on Prices Before Bidding.

JURY IS COMPLETED

Motion of Counsel of Defense Relative to Dismissing Those Last Summoned Is Overruled by Court.

District Attorney Arthur D. Judge Harris previously addressed the jury before the reading of the indictment, stating the arrangements agreed upon by the counsel for the defense for the general conduct of the case.

According to this agreement, Charles F. Choate, Jr., Henry F. Hurlburt, Charles W. Bartlett and Samuel J. Elder were designated to conduct the trial in behalf of the several defendants, conducting the cross-examination of witnesses, making objections to the admision of evidence and taking exceptions to rulings. It was also agreed that any of the counsel of the defense should be permitted to take up matters of special pertinence to any defendant such coun-Engineers Begin New Plans sel might represent, and this permission should include the right to address the for Connecting Railway court on points of law or, if necessary, Judge Harris explained that this agreement was made to expedite the trial and resulted from the numbers of attorheys who appear in the case.

Lord Kitchener before leaving Simla issued a farewell order to the Indian army in which he placed on record the excellent work done by all ranks during the last seven years. He thanked the officers and men for the ungradging way in which they have labored to give effect to his wishes. A continued offort, Lord Kitchener added, is necessary in order to attain the higher ideal, and continuity was the keyword of his last message to the army.

He said that among his aims have been the devolution of power down through all ranks of officers with a view to the encouragement of personal initiative and readiness to accept responsibility which are so invaluable in war. The response so far has been encouraging. He specially commended the British troops for their efforts to increase the physical efficiency. The retiring commander-in-chief remarked that the In dian army has passed through a time of trial. Attempts have been made to corrupt its lovalty and seduce it from its allegiance, but under the guidance of British and Indian officers it has remained unaffected and has earned the gratitude of its sovereign for its loyalty, bravery and devotion. # PRINCETON LOOKS FOR FAST VARSITY ELEVEN THIS YEAR

Coaches Have Seven of Last Year's Team as Nucleus With Many Fast New Men.

SIEGLING CAPTAIN

PRINCETON, N. J. The beginning of the third week of football practise at Princeton finds the eleven better prepared for a winning season than they have been for years. At such an early date it is of course impossible to predict a certain victory, but there is no lack of good material and a strong staff of coaches is on hand to develop the men. For the past two weeks a squad of about 30 of last year's team and scrubs have been going through a light daily drill. The general call for candidates has brought this number up to 66 men and with this squad the coaches are forming tenms. There are seven of last year's team to start with, Captain Siegling, who will play his old position at tackle; McFayden, last year's center; Welsh, who will play one end; McGregor, a substitute guard; Bammen, a tackle; Waller, a guard, and Bergen, last year's subquarterback. With such material to start with the coaches are having a hard time picking from the many candidates Team Has Two Hours of for the vacant places.

MORGAN & WRIGHT TIRES Here is a letter from the Automobile Sales Corporation, Philadelphia, that indicates the kind of service YOU would get from Morgan & Wright Tires MORGAN & WRIGHT. Detroit, Mich. Gentlemen-We are pleased to inform you that the set of tires just taken from the demonstrator which we received last November has run nearly 11,000 miles, and but two of the casings have undergone repairs during this mileage. The repairs were of a sectional nature, caused by stone bruises. The other Cadillac demonstrator upon which we have just put new tires ran 7852 miles, and would perhaps run over a thousand miles more, but their appearance is no longer good enough for a demonstrating car. This is an average of about 10,000 miles on the two cars. These tire showings have made it possible for us to get all our customers to specify your tires, which will number over 200 Cadillac cars this season. Yours very truly. AUTOMOBILE SALES CORPORATION. Aucor We have selected this letter from among the many reports of similar service we receive because of this significant fact: A demonstrating car. by reasen of the various "stunts" it must perform in exhibiting its selling points, gives its tires much harder usage than they would receive in ordinary service. You, as a motorist, may therefore reasonably accept the average service these eight tires gave on Cadillac demonstrating cars as a fair sample of the service Morgan & Wright Tires would give on your car. Political influences with some local pride are at work to continue the anomalous condition as there is no reason whatever why with both offices under one management the delivery should not be as prompt on one side the river as the other. Another fruitful difficulty in this same connection is the duplication of many names of streets on the two sides of the river. ### MONTEREY TO USE MORE CONCRETE

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.-Monterey will ebuild its flood devastated section in reinforced concrete. The advisability of this step was shown by a reinforced concrete bridge over the river that caused the havoc. Although every house for blocks had been completely swept away, the bridge stands today. How great the force of the waters thrown against the structure was is best told by two small holes in the upper part of the bridge through which the torrents hurled two telegraph poles. The flood has not proved an unalloyed misfortune. Most of the houses demolished needed replacement badly. Better structures will take their place. There is every indication that the city will rapidly recuperate. The first paper bag factory in the republic will be in operation there before long, and the building of a cardboard factory and paper mill will be undertaken by the Continental Paper Bag Company of the United States.

SITKA WILL LOSE WIRELESS TOWER

NEW HAVEN HIGHER

That the New York stock market is decidedly two-sided was again shown by the price movements of today's session. It also was seen to be very much in the hands of the manipulators. The further gain of U. S. Steel, establishing anoth new level, on heavy buying, might ha created a greater impression had it been the almost daily habit of Steel make a new high record for some cons erable time past. All of the bull no regarding the stock has been told, so as the street knows, and there was no ing in the morning's gossip to warra the continued upward movement in stock. But that made little differen to speculators. They put it up becar it suited them to do so

Reading also did some soaring. though it has not yet reached its p vious high record. The stock at present price yields a little better th 2 per cent on the investment. Atchis came into the limelight to some exte this morning. Expectations of an crease of the Atchison dividend to rate of 6 per cent were strengthened the August statement, showing an crease of $1,460,154 in gross operati revenue for the month. The increase operating expenses was only $549,949, that the gain in net, as compared w August, 1908, was $910,205. Wall stre has believed for several months that the corn crop came through in anythi like the condition hoped for the Ate son management would restore the con mon stock to a 6 per cent basis.

With Steel selling up to 8812, Atchise above 121 and Reading around 169 the rest of the market became stronger. Eric recovered quickly from the slump of yesterday. Eastern Steamship Company stocks to 2:30 p. m.: Is Reported to Have Plans to Run Line in Conjunction With Canadian Northern.

It is reported that in the near future the Eastern Steamship Company may establish a line of steamships to Nova Scotia.

£1 12 If the plans which have been talked over by the large interests are put into 49'4 effect the new line will be run in conjunction with the Canadian Northern railroad in its new railway system, which is known as the Halifax & Southwestern and extends from Port Wade on the northwest coast of Nova Scotia to Halifax.

The Canadian Northern is already a competitor of the Dominion Atlantic railway in the internal traffic of Nova Scotia and it is proposed also to seek some of the trade which the latter company has between Yarmouth and Boston. In fact the only advantage which the Dominion Atlantic has over the Halifax & Southwestern is the line of boats which the company maintains between this port and Yarmouth.

The cables were steady, which had some influence, but the principal factor seemed to be the light northwestern receipts accompanied by insistent claims that the country was not selling wheat at all freely. On the other hand there were despatches from Winnipeg to the effect that country receipts were increasing.

the market worked up rather casily, meeting but little opposition, and there was some increase in demand. The market for some time past has shown a very steady tone. It has failed to decline much on bear news and has responded to bullish news very readily. The large accumulations in stocks at present do not seem to have much effect.

Eastern Companies Are Being Urged to Hurry Cars Back as Rapidly as Possible to Care for Heavy Freight.

TRADE INCREASING

CHICAGO Further gains in traffic are reported by western railroad officials and 12 in every direction the outlook is said to be satisfactory. The western lines are now urging eastern roads to hurry cars back as rapidly as possible, as they are needed to move traffic.

It is predicted by Oct. 1 the demand will be so general that there will be a repetition of the early experiences of At Port Wade the government has East Boston Land ... 101/2 111/8 101/2 10 % 1907. Drygoods houses, both wholesale and retail, particularly the latter, are doing an immense business. An increased number of wholesale buyers are in the market, who are taking larger lines of goods than recently. Especial attention is being given to holiday goods, which are selling more liberally than last year. Jobbers are in receipt of mail and road orders calling for goods for immediate shipment and business in all leading lines is of large volume. Buyers have been trying to resist the upturn in the value of all fancy and staple cottons, which they saw forthcoming, while the sellers showed a disposition to withdraw from the market rather than accept large orders at prevailing prices. Staple prints, ginghams and white wash goods meet with a more active demand, and prices are showing a strong upward tendency, advances being reported in certain lines. There are further signs of prosperity at the mills of the local iron and steel industry. No line of iron and steel manufacture seems to offer anything like an exception to the general rule, of large and small orders pressing in upon the mills, while purchasers of weeks ago are sending in specifications with increasing urgency for early execution. In some instances there is enough business on the books to provide work for the best part of the year, if no further orders are taken, while the pressure of accumulated business taken by some of the mills increases with every day, and they are falling further and further behind in the filing of their orders. The position of the pig iron market grows stronger every day. The billet market is fully up to

The present prospects of business, the president says, indicate for the ensuing year the largest gross business in the history of the company. supplied in any other way. The world grows weary of human interpretations of the Scriptures, which are too often the result of an effort to prove a particular doctrine to be true, rather than the result of an earnest endeavor to gain the truth regardless of preconceived opinions and practices. Suffering humanity yearns for a present salvation and that interpretation of the Scriptures which enables one to show his faith by his works is received with joy and thanksgiving.

It has been said that it is possible to find scriptural authority for any teaching, but this seems to be true only because the theoretical interpretation of the Bible is received as the correct one. It is possible to evolve theories almost without number and when a theory is made the basis of interpretation it seems to have scriptural, support. The reader's concept of the Supreme Being is before him continually as he studies the Bible, enabling him to see clearly, or obscuring the true meaning, according to his concept of God. It is learned in Christian Science that mere personal opinion amounts to nothing. It is only as humanity is able to get away from the material sense of things that a right conclusion is reached. The practical worth of Christian Science is due to the fact that the basis of all it teaches is a definition of God that is scriptural, scientific, comprehensible and demonstrable. This definition of God illumines the Scriptures and they are read with greater interest and profit.

Self-Reliance

Self-reliance is a good lesson to learn Teach the child how to feed himself how his hair and wash his face; how to dress himself properly. These things he can very easily learn, one thing at a time. If the child is taught day after day to wait on himself, it will save some trouble in caring for him. But the greatest gain will be in the child's own character, says the Milwaukee Journal.

Teach him how to avoid vehicles in crossing a street; how to find the way to places; how to get off or on a street car; how to do an errand at a store and get the right-change. It is sometimes surprising at what an early age children can be taught these things. If a child is taught to use his judgment he will have judgment to use.

A boy trained to self-reliance will find that it stands him in good stead at school. He will seldom be wanting others to do his school work for him. He will be a more thorough student. will not only be seif helpful, but will also be able to make himself useful where there is need.

The Emergence of New York City

It poes not, as a rule, require much to touch the surface sentiment of a great city. Large communities are more responsive than small ones to forces that play upon the emotions. London, Paris, Berlin and New York can be moved by forms excitement that would scarcely create a ...pple in a provincial town. On the other hand, those things that are of prime importance in the civic life of a community receive more attention in the smaller than in the larger centers of population. It is a fact not peculiar to the United States that there is a higher sense of the dignity and responsibility of citizenship in the town than in the metropolis.

All the more gratifying is it, therefore, to be able to observe from a distance some of the better and more permanent effects upon our *chief city of the Hudson-Fulton celebration. The simple, civic pride of New York seems to have been awakened to such a degree that the inhabitants and those instruments that give voice to public sentiment and opinion are manifesting a better understanding of what the history, the rise, growth and prosperity of the city stand for.

The great communities of the country are consequences purely of national advancement. Not one of them could stand alone. New York city, the recognized leader of them all, has not taken the lead through any power inherent in itself, but through the operation of causes with the origin or direction of which it has had nothing to do. If it has become the highest communal expression of the intelligence and energy of the nation, it must not forget the source of its strength and its distinction.

Out of the events of the fortnight of festivities and contact with a million representatives of the citizenship of the republic, we believe, New York will emerge not only more cosmopolitan but more national in aims and characteristics than when she entered upon this celebration. For this she may well be proud, and for this the country may well be proud of her.

The time has come when New York may well cease to be a mere local community, with local aspirations and local prejudices. It may well aspire henceforth to stand for the United States as London stands for Great Britain, Paris for France or Berlin for Germany.

In view of the reference in President Taft's speeches and in the National Bankers Association convention to the central bank proposition, and also in view of the near approach of a session of Congress, interest is steadily increasing in the forthcoming report of the monetary commission, of which Senator Aldrich is chairman. Some of the best informed authorities confess their inability to say at this time exactly what the nature of that report will be. It is probably quite true that Mr. Aldrich and his colleagues are watching and endeavoring to discern the signs of the times, that they may propose something that will stand a fair chance of acceptance at the hands of Congress and at the hands of the

The Aldrich-Vreeland act, which was intended to meet an emergency and to be merely a temporary safeguard, will expire by limitation on June 30, 1914. Legislative years slip by rapidly, and the five years that intervene before this act expires are likely, in the opinion of a certain group of statesmen and of many financiers, to pass so quickly that unless the interest of Congress and the country can be enlisted in the matter at once, the conditions that existed before the Aldrich-Vreeland measure was passed are likely to be invited to return by a failure to extend the time of the operation of the enactment, or to replace it with something better.

The commission has been carrying on a careful and thorough inquiry into European methods of banking. It has gone into the entire financial systems of some of the continental countries, and the result has been the accumulation of a vast amount of information and data which only in part can be of service in solving our peculiar problems. However, through this tedious process, means of correcting defects in the American financial system have undoubtedly been discovered, while hints have been received from experienced foreign financiers that must be helpful in the framing of a measure designed to place our system on a solid and permanent basis. There is a widespread presumption that the commission will go very far beyond the scope of its activities as originally outlined. It is expected, indeed, that its report will not rest with proposals for the reformation of our currency system, for the establishment of a central bank and for changes in the laws intended for the regulation of national banks, but that state banks, and banking in general, will be thoroughly discussed and embraced in propositions for legislation of a remedial character.

Young Egypt

On the twenty-seventh anniversary of the British occupation of Egypt, Sept. 14, there opened at Geneva the second congress of Young Egypt. Its many-itemed program appears rather more imposing than its attendance, though it must be at once added that what the latter lacks in numbers it makes up in distinction; the attendance of Keir Hardie, M. P., is ample proof thereof. What the Young Egyptians aspire to is clearly set forth in the telegraphic message to the House of Commons, unanimously decided on and signed by the "representatives of the intellectual elements of organized Egyptian political parties gathered in congress at Geneva on the occasion of the anniversary of the entrance of British troops into Cairo." Very respectfully saluting the representatives of Great Britain, they recall the reiterated promises of the British government to evacuate Egyptian territory, and since Mr. Gladstone's reasons for the occupation no longer exist, they ask the House, for England's honor, to secure the withdrawal of the British troops from the valley of the Nile. As if the Hon. Keir Hardie's promised support were not sufficient, a message was likewise despatched to Hussein Hilmi Pasha, Turkish grand vizier, requesting his good offices with the British government. As Egypt is still a part of the Ottoman empire, the request is not without humor.

Young Egypt's program, like the nationalist press, is largely declamatory, with hardly an attempt at constructiveness. The notion that upon the exacuation of the Nile valley by the British forces a full-fledged parliamentary government would spring up-of the Egyptians, by the Egyptians, and for the Egyptians-is not serious because it dispenses with the most essential aspect—growth. That the experience of constitutionalism, first in Turkey and now in Persia, should have failed to have a sobering effect on the Egyptian nationalists is the strongest argument against their political maturity and fitness at the present time.

It would be puerile to dismiss their claims altogether on the ground that for over 2000 years Egypt had been ruled by aliens and that this rule had definitely incapacitated the Egyptians for selfgovernment. It would be puerile because democracy must eventually triumph everywhere, though we know not when. But in the case of Egypt, there is vastly more at stake than local administration. Unfortunately for its inhabitants, the Nile valley commands the principal highway to India and the far east, and as long as the lure of the Orient lasts, Egypt will count immeasurably more than the Egyptians. Nothing short of the strongest protection will avert a general broil over its possession. Ere the "Youth of Egypt" can be trusted to evolve a government strong enough to safeguard peace under great stress, the patriots will have to satisfy the world of their growth in constructive capacity and sober intent.

Encouragement for Invention

M. Santos-Dumont expressed a felicitous and opportune thought when he declared that he should hold his airship patent at the service of his fellow aeronauts, meaning that he would not exact the customary royalties from those using his invention. The spirit shown is not merely sportsmanlike; it is public spirit of an enlightened order. Aviation is likely to give rise to numerous problems of public policy. Jurisdiction of the air is a question the interest in which radio-telegraphy and aerial navigation share. The broad highways of the empyrean are not vet crowded to an extent to necessitate immediate traffic regulation. The ownership of patent rights, however, is a more immediate issue. Scarcely a day passes but the despatches tell of some new aspirant who grooms an aeroplane in secret until a flight more ambitious than he has essayed before reveals him unto fame, or at least notoriety. Amid all the intricacies of wings, sails, valves, rudders, gliders, motors and propellers there are but a few main types, chiefly the monoplane and the biplane. Despite peculiarities of steering-gear or flexible wing-tips many of these are bound to be but elaborations of other men's original ideas. These elaborations, however, will necessarily have merits of their own and therefore deserve encouragement. What is needed is to insure the pioneers in air craft adequate guerdon for their exercise of skill and perseverance without closing the avenues of enterprise to the emulous.

The pathway of mechanical success is littered with the debris of patents that promised much but that failed because their worth was restricted by private interest. Since aeronautics is fraught with such possibilities for overcoming the limitations of locality, would it not be desirable that some system be inaugurated by which . all the world, as well as the happy inventor, might profit by his devices? Governments might offer prizes for meritorious inventions of airships or their auxiliary appliances, successful competition involving the transfer to the public of the right to utilize the invention. Were such prizes made sufficiently substantial, as they well might be, the inventors could harvest their profits without the sale of patents or the competition and risk of manufacture. Already it has been seen that one of the most potent stimuli of aeronautical prowess has been the handsome prizes offered by foreign governments, societies of savants, and newspapers.

This system would rightly put the stress on rewarding discovery of a method, not on inhibiting the free use of it. It is consonant with modern thought. Perchance, happily, the plan might be extended so as to include many lines of activity besides aviation.

Iron Ore

Conservation

How the supply of iron ore in this country is likely to be affected by the provision of the new tariff law reducing the duty on iron ore is being made the subject of interesting discussion and conjecture.

No sooner, it seems, was our new tariff bill enacted, with the iron ore schedule revised downward, than Sweden, Spain and other countries entered upon preparations for the shipment of iron ore to the United States. The ore from foreign mines, it is said, will now find a ready demand in this country; in price it can easily compete with the ore mined here; instead of exhausting our own resources in this particular we shall draw upon the iron ore resources of other nations; we shall have all the iron ore we can possibly need, and at a price that will make its working profitable; and our own iron ore supply will be conserved.

It is argued, and with great force, that we might do equally well for our timber supply, and for other of our raw products, by admitting them at a lower rate of duty, or by placing them on the free list; and that, having in mind the conservation of our natural resources, this would be the most sensible thing for us to do. On the other hand, it is said that whatever might be the effect of the removal of the tariff on raw materials of another kind, the reduction of the duty on iron ore has not made that product any cheaper in this country, and that it is not going to do so. Those who use iron and steel, and their manufactured products, will pay as much for them as ever, it is held. It is pointed out, also, that thousands of men who have been engaged in getting out American iron ore will be compelled to seek other employment.

From all this it appears that while we benefit ourselves in some particulars, we harm ourselves in others by doing that which we felt it right to do. Of course, if the whole proceeding be measured by the rule of selfishness, it will be a little difficult to discover just where the change in the tariff in this particular is going to help anybody. Even though it may aid in the conservation of our own resources, it will aid in the exhaustion of the resources of our neighbors. If we measure it by a higher rule, however, we shall be able to see that even though the taking of a righteous step may seem in the beginning to be followed by undesirable results, all things must be adjusted for good in the end.

As DID the patience, perseverance and determination of the famous explorer and inventor whose deeds they commemorate, so will the 50,000,000 Hudson-Fulton stamps, when properly attached to letters, prove that we are sure to "get there" if we firmly attach ourselves to some purpose and stick to it.

NEWFOUNDLAND proposes to shorten the journey from Great Britain to Canada and the United States by twenty-four, possibly thirty-six hours. The vast project, which deserves wide attention, has the support of the government; a land grant of 125,000 acres and a mail contract for twenty-five years with an annual subsidy of $75,000 are among the inducements of the enterprise. It is the fog-free zone on which the plan is based. That zone stretches eastward from Green bay and is not only fog-free but wind-free. The thick summer fogs of Belle Isle straits do not reach the approach to the bay and the Grand banks are to the south of it. Thus the proposed fast steamship line from an English port to a point on Green bay may be expected to cut the present sea voyage in two, or little short of it. From the landing an eighty-five mile railroad will take the passengers across Newfoundland to a point on Bay of Islands, where fast steamers will make connection with the Canadian mainland. This, however, is not the ultimate shape of the project for the logical communication between Newfoundland and Canada is by a tunnel to be constructed under Belle Isle straits, and from there by a railroad connecting Labrador with Quebec. A brisk and growing passenger traffic will some day warrant the outlay, which at present is out of the question.

But does the public yearn for a three-day crossing? One is inclined to say no. A sea voyage has too many genuine and lasting attractions to invite curtailment beyond a certain point. Above all it calls a halt to the insensate haste of our age. Despite the bewildering records of the Lusitania and the Mauretania, the standards of Atlantic travel do not seem to have changed materially, and judging from lists of passengers the popularity of other ships and other lines continues unimpaired. Had the two Cunarders created a new market, they must inevitably have caused the construction of competing speeders, and at the same time the Newfoundland route would have attracted far greater attention to its possibilities than it did.

The vast importance of the "fog-free zone line" lies in its imperial possibilities. It is a link between the mother country and Canada, the Pacific and Australia, bound to be forged in the course of imperial consolidation. In connection with Canada's new transcontinental, with the proposed "All Red" route, with naval defensein short, with imperial unity—the Newfoundland project marks an

The Terms of Forester Pinchot's Retention

THE authoritative statement in which it is. said that the President did not at any time during the so-called Pinchot-Ballinger controversy consider the former undeserving of his continued confidence is apparently satisfying to Mr. Pinchot's many friends. In truth, however, there has never been any question in the mind of the public with regard to Mr. Taft's disposition toward a man who had enjoyed in so large a measure the confidence and esteem of his predecessor. Throughout the so-called controversy, the public found no fault with the work that Mr. Pinchot had accomplished when confining himself to his legitimate duties and when acting in accordance with the laws of the country rather than in accordance with his private conception of what the laws ought to be. This appears to have been Mr. Taft's attitude in the matter, also. He is as earnest in his desire for the conservation of our natural resources as was Mr. Roosevelt, or as is Mr. Pinchot, but he is not only anxious that our natural resources shall be conserved according to law, but determined that this shall be the case.

This newspaper at the very beginning of the unfortunate controversy insisted that all parties to it, including the principals, would serve a far better purpose by devoting themselves exclusively to the tasks assigned rather than to criticism of others. We have seen no reason to modify this position, nor to change our opinion that conservation congresses will cease to perform useful parts if they shall hereafter, as in the past, be made vehicles for impassioned discussions such as have lately diverted public attention from the main question.

Whether at the bottom of all this dispute there has been too much zeal, too much personal feeling or too much politics, matters very little now. The important thing is that the dispute is ended.

Mr. Ballinger remains in the cabinet. Mr. Pinchot remains in the forest service. Both share equally in the confidence of President Taft with regard to his insistence upon the observance of the law

THREE HUNDRED years ago, at the time Hudson was entering New York bay, the Pilgrims were fleeing from religious persecution in England to Holland, where they hoped to enjoy religious freedom. It is generally supposed that the public school had its origin in England, but certain writers claim that at this period there was no movement in England looking to the popular education of all classes. In Holland, on the contrary, not only did civil and religious liberty obtain, but the common school as well, in consequence of which the peasantry with but few exceptions were able to read and write, and the upper classes were acquainted with several of the modern languages, as well as mathematics and the classics.

There is no doubt that the Pilgrims absorbed many of the views that obtained in that country and brought them across the sea to Plymouth rock, but, according to a writer in one of our current magazines, it was not until forty years later that the common school was established in New England, and it was not until 150 years later that the schools of this section extended to girls for the first time the facilities for obtaining a free education, it being considered, evidently, that only the male members of the family had practical use for learning. Meanwhile, in New York, according to this writer, the free school was established in 1623, the minister and the schoolmaster arriving at the same time.

It would seem, therefore, that the common school came to America not through New England, as we have always believed, but through Manhattan. This is offered in no spirit of controversy, but simply for the purpose of submitting facts which bear evidence of being trustworthy from a historical standpoint. What we are especially concerned in, of course, is the fact that the common school did arrive, and continued and waxed strong, until today the schoolhouse is found in every section throughout the length and breadth of our
